

Nya Todd is a Michigan State alum who graduated with a degree in Comparative Cultures and a minor in International Development. Nya's interests have always been concerned with the uniqueness of every individual, and she has taken that passion for uncovering the way the mind works to her research at Michigan Health Council. This is where she continued her education and became certified in Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion. Nya's methods of teaching are created with the intention to recognize people's experiences and give justice to the identities of individuals.
